

Morris Arboretum | Meadowbrook and Hillcrest Aves. | many notable architects | 19th-21st centuries. Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania is a cultural landscape comprised of beautiful historic and new buildings set within an internationally important arboretum. Contributors include Chandler, Cope and Stewardson, Eyre, Cret, McGoodwin, Olmsted Brothers, and Andropogon. The fernery is a signature Victorian feature, while 18th and early 19th century vernacular architecture dot the landscape, including a 1761 cottage and an 1854 mill. The 1968 loss of the Compton Mansion was a seminal event for the community, helping to broaden awareness of the burgeoning preservation movement and sparking stellar subsequent preservation work at the Arboretum.
